Larry Nolan, a former professor at SOSU, will soon have a new product on the market. This product, Hiccups Away, provides relief from common hiccups.

Nolan entered the Wes Watkins New Product and Process Fair in McAlester, OK, on April 4, 1997. He won a Grand Champion trophy, a First Place Blue Ribbon, and a Free Enterprise Place Blue Ribbon, Fair in McAlester, OK, the Wes Watkins New Product and Process Fair Award in the open division.

The FDA has approved a label for Hiccups Away. Nolan will now be able to legally market his product.

"I was able to convince the FDA that there is common hiccups and medical causes," Nolan said. Nolan sent the FDA data and research to prove that there are two kinds of hiccups: common and medically caused hiccups. With hard work Nolan proved the difference to the FDA.

Many combinations of the formula have been tested. Nolan feels he has found an effective formula, and all of the ingredients are natural.

According to Nolan, in many studies, Hiccups Away has been 80% effective on non-medically produced hiccups. "It stops your hiccups by over-stimulating your autonomic nervous system," Nolan said. "I now have a corporation," Nolan said. "At some point in time, I'll probably try to go public if it does become a success, selling stock, but right now I'm just holding all the stock."

Nolan has named his company Nolan Research Inc. He has also received his official corporate seal, and his license to manufacture. Nolan has also received his license to manufacture.

The Oklahoma State Department of Health, from OKC, sent an inspector down to inspect my manufacturing facility," Nolan said. Inspectors check facilities to insure that they meet code and sanitary standards.

This hiccup formula, "will hopefully be for sale in about two or three months," Nolan's wife, Betty Nolan, a professor at SOSU, said.

Nolan buys raw materials that are concentrated. He then mixes his product together at certain percentages.

Nolan has a machine that he can run manually or automatically. This machine turns out 3600 packages per hour.

"I was able to convince the FDA that there is common hiccups and medical causes."

A new Pentium computer lab has been opened in the basement of the Morrison building. Another lab is planned to be opened next to it. J.J. Lanpher, director of education technologies for the School of Arts and Letters, has developed and created this lab.

"It's for the advancement and education of the students," said Lanpher.

Lanpher did all the research to decide what type of equipment the lab should have. Afterwards, he developed the lab and submitted a request for permission to do the configurations. When Lanpher received permission, he had more than the set-up of each computer to do. Lanpher had to design the room completely. He decided everything from the type of carpet, desks, and lighting to which humidifiers and alarm systems to have.

"It's a recruiting effort for this University," Lanpher said. "Presently I'm doing the configuration for another Pentium lab which will be next door to this one. It'll be for 21 computers," said Lanpher.

"It's for the advancement and education of the students" -- Lanpher --

Having this lab has been a great asset to the students. The computers here are cated than those in the other labs. I love learning the Photoshop technologies," Amy Grundahl, junior, said.

"I've heard comments from other students that the computers are a lot faster," said freshman Bobby Simmons, a lab assistant.

"It is a very nice lab. This is my first time in here. I like it very much. It is helpful to me," senior Valerie James said.

The new lab should be completed and opened before next semester.

The new Pentium computer lab is open from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. Sunday through Tuesday. The lab is open on Thursday from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. and 3:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Wednesday and Friday.
Is College My Real Job?

By Jacqueline Baumann

After graduating from high school, the last thing I ever did going to college. I hated school, so why would I want to keep going to school? I had great plans of becoming the manager of the shoe store where I worked. I knew everything I was ever going to need to know. What an attitude, huh? The only bad thing about this was I didn’t know anything. I only thought I had all the answers. I disappointed meetings I have ever been an appointment with my district manager. I still don’t have a clue what I am going to be.

I didn’t believe I was a good writer. I didn’t believe in as much as you can every day and share it with someone else. Everything happens for a reason and we don’t always know what that reason is. Just make the most of every thing you do and good things will happen.

When I was in college. I hated school, so the last thing I was ever going to do was go to college. I hated school, so that’s not exactly true. I had another job at the bookstore was I didn’t enjoy this. I quit on the spot. I still don’t have a clue what I am going to be.

I didn’t believe I was a good writer. I didn’t believe in as much as you can every day and share it with someone else. Everything happens for a reason and we don’t always know what that reason is. Just make the most of every thing you do and good things will happen.

What's 22 years old, weighs five thousand pounds, and has 2 peanut beige complexion? It's SOSU's Art Car. What's an Art Car?

The Art Car is streamlined and decorated to become a rolling piece of art. Local businessman, Mark Swearengin, donated his 1976 Oldsmobile Delta 88 for Southeastern's entry in the annual Art Car Parade.

The parade will be held April 18, in Houston, Texas. Last year over 180 wheeled works of art and some Dude, chair of the SOSU art department, thinks building an Art Car will be a novel experience for the students involved.

In a strange set of coincidences, a general theme for the car has developed. Not only is the car already peanut beige, but it is from the same year a peanut farmer was sworn in the White House. Swearengin has also since given The Art department the casting mold for Durant's "big peanut." Imagine the "big peanut" as a hood scoop for the Olds 88 or used as an offset style fins on the trunk.

Larry Dyson Motors is already providing technical advice to the Olds will be road-trip worthy. Interested in helping or have some ideas on working out the particulars of the Art Car. Want to make a tax deductible donation? See the Art Car bulletin board in the art department or contact Brad Cushman, 2642, and a "big nut" road trip could be in your future.

Movie Reviews:

The Titanic

All I can say about the TITANIC is that it is the best movie I have seen in a long, long time.

All of the acting was excellent. The special effects were superior to most other movies that I have seen and it was very elegantly portrayed on the screen (which means there were no nauseating scenes or sex scenes.)

I promise it will spellbound through the events in the movie. I know that a lot of the events in the movie weren't factual, but it is so true;

I promise it will bring a tear to your eye.

Blues Brothers 2000

If you have seen the movie Blues Brothers 2000, then you know that it is almost exactly like the first movie.

"Big Peanut" Set To Make Houston Art Debut

The Thearpy-eyed young woman sitting in the junior psychology class was more serious about leaving school than most.

She was tired of spending weekends alone, tired of all her nights out, and wondering where all the nice young men her parents promised she'd meet at college were.

She chose to go to school in Hawaii, she said, because she had been dating someone who wasn't a member of The Mormon Church. A nice girl, she added, but not an ideal mate because he didn't share her spiritual beliefs. How­ever, given that she hadn't met the man of her dreams in Hawaii, she was thinking about hooking up with the handsome, but honey, and returning to school.

That's when Grandy got the idea. Students giggled in church the next week when the young woman mentioned she was thinking about not returning to school.

"There's not enough dating going on campus, that's for sure," he said, noting that women outnumbered men by about 20 percent. "I think everyone needs a little nudge sometimes."

Making the dating scene even more difficult for some students, Grandy added, is the Mormon Church's strong emphasis on marriage and family.

"It's ironic, I know," Grandy said. "But a single date has become so laden with significance and high expectations. Students complain that when they go out, all their friends ask, 'Well, when's the marriage?' That just ruins the relationship, just ruins the fun.

"My message is for students to forget about all that," he continued. "I tell them not to over dramatize the date or build it up into something it's not. Students should simply indulge in their sense of adventure, make some memories and have some fun."

Amen, said senior Cardocon, a dating coordinator, who has paired up about 10 couples since the program started a month ago.

Cardocon keeps his eyes open for potential matches. She calls students, sends them notes and sometimes pulls them aside to "give them the lowdown on someone who they think she's all that and a bag of chips."

"A lot of the guys just want me to go out and test the waters," she said. "They'll ask a girl if she's going to stay out. She's just going to see if she's ready. My job is to gauge that for them.

When she's working with the first time, Cardocon said she sends them on a group date. "It's much safer," she said. "We don't want anyone getting hurt. The goal is to ac­tually keep students dating on campus and in the church."

"What happens when people aren't in­terested in going out with the person who has a crush on them?"

"We're not forcing students to forget about all that," she said. "We just find someone else. But be­fore I do that, I tell them, not to make them sure that they're not doing what most other movies that I have seen and it was very elegantly portrayed on the screen (which means there were no nauseating scenes or sex scenes.)

Leonardo DiCaprio and Kate Winslet worked together as if they had known each other all their lives. They brought a realism to the screen that few actors and actresses have been able to do before.

The romance in the movie was breathtaking. Usually I don't like all that mushy stuff, but I was spellbound through the whole movie.

I know that a lot of the events in the movie weren't factual, but it is so true. I would recommend anyone and everyone to watch at least once or twice, if not more.

I promise it will bring a tear to your eye.

Blues Brothers 2000

If you have seen the movie Blues Brothers 2000, then you know that it is almost exactly like the first movie.

This movie features Elwood Jones (Eddie) and John Goodman (John). The two pair up with an interesting story behind them. The story behind them is almost the same as the first.

I was surprised by the famous black girls who used to work on the streets. The three have the time of their lives.

This movie features an all-star musical cast including, Anna Franklin, Eric Clapton, B.B. King, Travis Tritt, Steve Winwood and James Brown.

Shay Jones carried perfect 4.0 GPA's in the '97 Fall semester. Pendley also had the honor of being an Academic All-American in junior college. She participates in activities at the Baptist Student Union. She is pursuing a Bachelor of Science degree with an Elementary Education Major. Her hometown is Eufaula, Oklahoma. Shasti Pendley is a junior transfer from Seminole Junior College with an undecided major, from Mustang, Oklahoma. Miller and Pendley are both studying Education. Miller believes if you can dribble a basketball, hit a baseball, or throw a football, you are obviously on the same intellectual level as the Cro-Magnon man. But believe it or not, there are people, men and women alike, who study everything from computer methodology to the underwater cities of Atlantis. Miller and Pendley agree that they feel that studying doesn't always come at the normal time. They have jobs or participate in any other sports on the collegiate level. Miller is a dance major and Pendley studies pre-medicine. Miller and Pendley all carry more than the regular credit hour load. And even though they don't have jobs or participate in any other sports on the collegiate level, Miller and Pendley agree that they feel the stress of being both an athlete and an academic scholar.

"It pushes you to work harder and have more motivation," Miller said. Pendley thinks, "it's definitely fun." Pendley attributes her lack of stress to the fact that she has done it her whole life. "You do what you have to do," Pendley said.

All three ladies are finding that basketball practice is at least two hours a day, six days a week. So studying doesn't always come at the normal time. "I study everywhere, but mostly at breakfast," Miller said. Pendley studied by her boyfriend. Pendley has been in the situation where she had her book right up until Coach Keith started practice.

According to Miller and Pendley, they have been on away trips when, "we eat outside in the sun, in our uniforms, and did homework." It comes to footwear and worrying about whether they should be studying or practicing, the ladies all have their own opinions. "It's constantly on your mind," Pendley said. "I hate the feeling." Miller thinks that, "sometimes you have to take the time." And Miller admits that she works better under pressure. "I study everywhere, but mostly at breakfast," Miller said.
